

I urge the FCC to keep the Internet open for all. Freedom of information is essential to the progression of the United States. In order for us to remain a superpower and a representation of the great people who reside here we must not allow ISPs to charge content providers to allow the American people to access their content. Any restriction on the flow of information by the a third party between private individuals hinders our progress.